WALDORF LAZURE DECOR

The Lazure painting method is created by the special brush technique and use of water based paints like watercolor. Invented by Rudolf Steiner in 1919, it was first seen in the Waldorf school classrooms. By layering anywhere from 5 to 20 semi-transparent colors, a sense of depth and vibrant nuances are formed. This ensemble of color is natural to the eye as one searches for depth and is compared much to gazing at the clouds. The choice and theory of color play an important role depending on the functionality of the space: Home, work, conference halls, classrooms, etc.
